Nokia 6300 v7.30, 6295, 6296, 6295 (RM-217, 179, 177, 178) Fone are different Å .Q: Segmented Control for Admin with Master-Detail Setup I have a small question, I am using this gcm for 1.6.0 and I want to have the record and setting option but I don't know how I can do this with one segmented control, I know how to make it with 2 segmented control, but I want to make a master-detail setup. Any one can help me about this? Thx A: You can use the Master Detail template (first example) from the Lightning Component developer's guide: For more complex settings, you can customize the lightning component and set custom attributes in the custom component that add the functionality you need. The Lightning Design System (LDS) controls are robust tools that provide a better way to write your own component, and the various controls in LDS give you a more flexible approach. You can use these controls even if you don't use the Lightning components framework, which gives you control over how your component behaves, if you want to abstract out common attributes from your component (such as all supported languages), and use global values for the class attributes. The attributes you will want to use when creating your component can be found in the Lightning Design System. Q: OBSOLETE Library In the list of packages, under the title "Obsolete packages" I found three packages: gnome-mplayer gnome-mplayer-failsafe gnome-mplayer-sc are they "obsolete"? Or are they just kept for some reason? What are their functions/advantages/disadvantages? A: The package is kept in official Ubuntu repositories, as the maintainer of the package (e.g. me on gnome-mplayer) releases the packages to Ubuntu users. The versions of the package are supported by Ubuntu repositories. It is up to the maintainer to decide when to remove obsolete software. Electrochemical study on the
