A: This code will fix the problem, it simply adds the missing font files: chmContent = Content.Open ("", null, "" & path & ""); chmContent.FindAllFonts (true); A: I encountered this problem in Delphi 10.2.3, so I downloaded the UFRCurrent.rtf from Codeproject and pasted it into the Delphi ChmContent project. A: You can check whether the font is available using: case FormatSettings.Tools.GetMessageFont: if (FormatSettings.Tools.GetMessageFont.IsFontSupported("FONTNAME")) // use the font else // do something else. This can be done before you perform the search for the font file. You may need to set your font type in the DFM settings to "True Type Font" and in the code settings to use the old setting "Windows XP (compatibility)" and then you will be able to know which system font(s) are available. Alternatively, you could use a font that is built for Delphi. If you use these fonts you can change the code settings to use them and they will be picked up by the compiler. With these fonts you need to do some additional work to set the code settings. Furthermore you can set your font settings to "Fallback to Windows XP (Compatibility)". 1,2-Difluoro-4-nitrobenzene and 1,2-difluoro-3-nitrobenzene are industrially useful compounds, and the development of processes for preparing them has been attempted energetically. As for these processes, for example, there are a method of obtaining these compounds by photolysis of 1,2-difluoro-4-nitrobenz 6d1f23a050
